Those who planned the 1944 Oracle Annual seek to present in its pages the unwinding film of the record of one year in the history of Bay View. In this book the pattern of Oracle Annuals is not entirely changed, for student life is not. A touch has even been kept of the beauty of the setting of the school because that remains unmarred by three years of war.

But as an observer scans these pages, he must become increasingly aware that high school students at Bay View are fiving primarily in the present. Theirs is in good part a training to meet the demands of war largent ominous, not to be denied. Every true Bay View student hopes to serve his country now and to prepare for service in the years to come.

In Memoriam

CAROL DE la HUNT

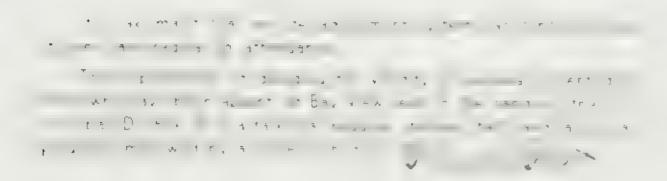

On the quiet afternoon of August 7, 1943, friends of Miss Carol De la Hunt gathered to bid her farewell the final chapter in the life of a Bay View teacher had been written, a life final with dramatic successes, creative adventures artistic appreciation, and deep friendship

She walked in beauty," spoke the earnest voice of the clergyman. Bay View will not be the same without her," said Dr. Kom to the student group assembled the opening day of school in early September. 'During ten years of service we had come to know her as a tireless worker who held high the ideals and the best interests of this school, and who gave unselfishly of herself—gave of herself to the students who were entrusted to her care

MR. WHITCOM8, Chief Counselor

The "School at War" places a grave burden of responsibility upon its counselors and homeroom advisors, for they must guide youth at a time when all plans for the future seem but feeble straws in the turbulence of world affairs. They must prepare the Bay View boy and girl of today with the confidence in himself which will enable him to face un flinchingly a chahenging era, and at the same time safeguard him from rash decisions resulting from the prevalent emotional fervor of wartime.

Besides their usual job of developing character, the counselors now have many additional duties. The problem of part-time work has attained larger proportions than ever before. Many students, most of them seniors, carry lightened programs and work half days, thus satisfying their urge to enter industry without sacrificing educational needs. The counselors must assist in compiling the complete files of those students entering the armed services, including the records of personality, deportment, and extra-curricular activities.

Yes, the "School at War" demands much from a counse ors, but the fruits of their abor, they hope, will be clearly evident when time gives perspective and peace is once more with us

Only those closely as lated with the Annual in a of two confidence of development can truly appreciate the vast amount of work involved. Careful page planning and photographing were necessary to obtain the most attractive compliction. Picture-taking schedules had to be arranged for as many as forty "shots in one day to eliminate unnecessary trips for the photographer. As soon as the photographs were in unnecessary trips for the photographer. As soon as written material had to be presided, by and organism of the engravers. Meanwhile all written material had to be presided, by and organism of the engravers whose skillful hands was entrusted the first rough draft of the book.

Wartime restrictions again created numerous problems in this, the third Bay View Annual born in the shadow of war. Because of the scarcity of tilm and limited space, only brief glimpses of the schools numerous war and club activities could be presented. To comply with government regulations concerning the use of paper, we were able to retain the same number of pages as last year's book only by using a somewhat lighter weight caper.

That the school was behind us one-hundred per ent was evidenced by the deluge of subscriptions in the first few days of the campaign. Commercials were broadcast each morning and afternoon, and noch hour audiences were entertained in the audionum for three days with colorful skits: a riotous movie studio scene where screen tests were being filmed, a student magician complete with a live pigeon, and climaxing the campaign, a huge tentoot. Annual with living pictures of outstanding events of former yearbooks.

Close co-operation and an unself sh contribution of time and effort made this 1944 Oracle Annual a book we, the annual staff, are proud to place in the hands of our fellow-students. We have attempted to capture on these pages the prevailing spirit of determination, the will to win displayed by Bay View students, It is our wish that this book carry forever between its lines this graphic portrayal of a portion of our country's youth and their service to her in time of need

Because the boys in school today are facing military duty tomorrow, Boys' C is especially interested in preparing members for this task. A section of tured German newsreel contrasted the propaganda of the Third Reich with the official U.S. Government films of the A-36 Mustang attack plane.

The members of Boys Cub are fast becoming men, and, as they grow into new experiences, they must have guidance Bay View is supproviding an output Boys' Club. This is desired to instit within the boys of Bay View a cameraderie will be carried with them throughout the lives.

Girls' Club

The familiar announcement 'Girls Club meets today' always creates a sudden manifestation of enthus'asm and anticipation among most members the club as they search hurriedly through their urses for the elusive membership card. Again it time to attend another of those long-awaited eighth hours of superlative entertainment.

High on the popularity poll of the programs was that hilarious play entitled "Ladies Alone." Other features of note were the interesting variety programs and the several parties in the gymnasium where the girls danced to the tunes of the school dance band.

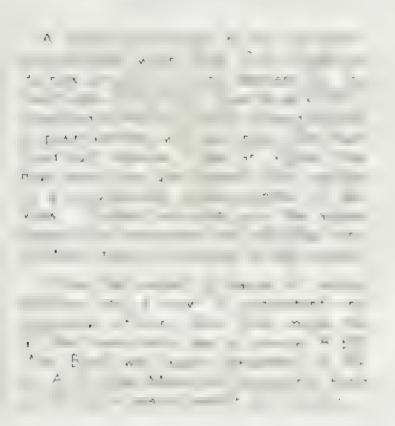

To help each girl solve her particular wardrobe problems and to display really fashionable appare the club again presented its annual style show on April 6. Especially helpful was the accented war motif which proved that charm is possible even when our primary job is winning a war.

Round Table

In keeping with the on-to-a-quick-victory spirit which is pulsating in American life and stimulating every patriotic mind to get the most from his red and blue ration points, the first meeting of Round Table brought forth an original comedy 'Keeping Alive.

Quick to answer the challenge: Resolved: That high school students under 18 years of age should be permitted to work more than two hours a school day, the negative team won the decision of the judges. The pros and cons discussed in the debate caused a particular stir because the question concerned many members working part-time in war plants.

As an extra attraction Round Table ented Philip Noble noted lecturer and traveler, who talked about "The Charm of Old New England." Several hundred students crowded the main floor of the auditorium to see the colorful movies of reconstructed Old New England villages and of the scenic beauties which meet the eye of the tourist.

EXECUTIVE TRAINING

Round Table

Round Table as always been the high-light of every semester. Members rush to the auditorium to get a seaf "up front where they can't miss any detail of the candidates election skits which are usually written and produced entirely by the students themselves. This year the skits ranged from "A Journey to a Star" with The Comets to a side grance into the of Socrates and Plato

For the first time in the history of any Bay View club, the Round Table required candidates for election to complete a preparatory course in parliamentary law and licers training. The valuable knowledge diexperience offered in this course is open only to those who can qualify in scholarship, earnestness, and aptitude.

A well-rounded program of dramatics, dancing, singing, debating, and music gave all members an opportunity to participate in the activities of their choice.

MEETING THE DEMAND FOR WARTIME PRODUCTION

Nordberg's contribution to the war effort has been supplying the tools of war needed by our armed forces. Vital supplies to our forces overseas and to our Allies are being carried in vessels propelled by Nordberg Diesel and steam engines. The production of chemicals, strategic metals and other materials for war are produced through the aid of Nordberg machinery. In addition to the regular line of Nordberg products that have gone to war, vast quantities of naval ordnance have also been supplied.
